NAZI PINCER DRIVE STATED UNDER WAY, 2 RUSSIAN SECTORS

Official Announcement Says
Kholm and Byelaya-Tserkov
Occupied by Germans

A DANGEROUS WEDGE

High Command Announces
New 60-Mile Thrust, Threatening Kiev-Moscow Railway

BERLIN, Aug. 6—(INS)—Arms of a vast Nazi pincer drive, executed on a grand scale, were reported pushing rapidly into Russian territory on the northern and southern sectors of the battle from today after German mechanized legions captured two strategic Soviet strongholds.

An official announcement said Kholm, mid-way between Leningrad and Smolensk, had been occupied on the northern wing of the front, while on the south German forces took Byelaya-Tserkov, 45 miles south of Kiev.

Occupation of Kholm drove a dangerous wedge between the Red Armies defending Leningrad and those opposing the Germans at the Smolensk salient on the broad highway to Moscow.

Simultaneously, capture of Byelaya-Tserkov placed the Ukrainian metropolis of Kiev in serious danger of encirclement, it menaced the communications between Kiev and the Black Sea port of Odessa.

A Berlin radio report picked up by NBC said German bombers attacked the Russian Black Sea port of Nokolayev, damaging about 20,000 tons of Russian shipping. One steamer of 6,000 or 8,000 tons was declared to have been sunk.

Meanwhile, the German High Command announced a new 60-mile thrust southeast of Smolensk which threatened to cut the Kiev-Moscow railway.

At the same time the Luftwaffe was credited by a German military spokesman with having eliminated the "bulk" of Russia's huge air force. He claimed the "remnants" of the Red air force are now declining battle with German planes.

Dispatches from the front indicated the Soviets were putting up furious resistance in their "last desperate attempt to avoid complete annihilation in the German iron rings."

Picnic at Fergussonville Is Pronounced Complete Success

FERGUSONVILLE, Aug. 6—The picnic held Sunday afternoon on the Fergussonville tract, was a complete success. It is estimated that 500 people attended.

There were sack races for boys and girls, three-legged races, bean races, pie-eating contests, with prizes being given to the winners.

Donated articles were auctioned off, and netted a goodly sum. At another table, suppers were served. There were booths where frankfurters, hot corn, candy, ice cream and cake were sold.

The setting for the picnic was ideal, it being in a little patch of woods on the tract, the men having cleaned up the brush Saturday, making the place neat and clean.

Germans Claim Capture of 895,000 Soviet Troops

BERLIN, Aug. 6—With $95,000 Soviet troops captured and an even greater number killed or wounded, German forces have won the battle of Smolensk, the "drive to Moscow" is under way and swift progress is being made on all fronts, the Nazi high command announced today.

In an official communiqué which for the first time in many days lifted the curtain on developments along the bloody 2,000 miles battlefield, the High Command said that "staggering losses" has been inflicted upon the enemy.

German troops are now advancing on all three sectors of the field—toward Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev in these areas.

Declaring the Soviet High Command is no longer in possession of reliable information regarding the situation in its own front, Hitler's headquarters explained its own silence in these words:

"German reports have exercised greatest reserve in order that valuable information should not find its way into the hands of the enemy."

"But in view of the commencement of new operations, the moment has come to give information regarding the struggle which started with penetration of the Stalin Line."

Coincident with this communiqué, the High Command announced that many tons of explosives and tens of thousands of incendiary bombs were dropped on Moscow last night. Many fires were started at "war important" objectives, especially airplane plants.

There was little change in the July set-up. The marriage license dockets show that 69 per cent of the applicants in July were non-residents of Bucks county and that most of the out-of-towners came from Philadelphia. And most of the Philadelphians who got licenses here were married by Justice of the Peace James Laughlin, of Bristol township. There were quite a few Trentonians, but not as many as usual in July's crop.

The oldest applicant in July was 78 and the youngest 16. The average age of the July applicants was 27 years. The large majority of applicants had positions, an entirely different picture than July a year ago. Many of the July applicants are employed in defense industry jobs.

There were 18 divorcees applied for licenses in July. The applicants came from eight states including Pennsylvania.

Bristol led the county with 14 applicants, with Quakertown, Doylestown and Morrisville following along.

Marriage licenses were issued to eight school teachers during the month of July. Ten airplane factory workers were issued licenses. More than 75 per cent of the female applicants had positions other than housework, an unusually high average.

BUCKS SCHOOL DISTRICTS TO SHARE IN $118,925

Over 2100 Penna. Fourth
Class Districts To Have
Part in Payments

AMOUNTS MADE KNOWN

HARRISBURG, Aug. 6—More than 2100 of Pennsylvania's fourth class school districts will share payments totaling $7,051,150 approved today by Auditor General F. Clair Ross covering the first semi-annual payment of State aid in the support of public schools for the school year 1940-41.

Payments, which are made in August and February, represent reimbursement for expenses of the previous school year.

Because of failure to submit proper reports to the Department of Public Instruction, payments amounting to $399,237 to 131 of the districts are being withheld and will not be approved until these reports are filed.

Allegheny county heads the list of new payments with 60 districts sharing $277,220; next in order is Cambria County with 37 districts sharing $232,703; and Luzerne County with 48 districts and $230,136.

Bucks county's 45 districts share $118,925.09 and will be paid as follows: Bedminster township, $2,858.11; Bridgeton township, $950.62; Buckingham township, $5,704.71.

PERKASIE WILL VOTE ON SUNDAY MOVIES THIS FALL

Council Receives Petition To Place Question On The November Ballot

304 NAMES ARE SIGNED

PERKASIE, Aug. 6—Borough Council has received a petition to have Sunday movies placed on the ballot this Fall.

The petition carried 304 signatures, and if 200 or more of them are found to be those of bona fide electors, the community will have the opportunity to exercise local option in the matter of seven-day entertainment.

It is obligatory upon borough council to forward legal petitions carrying 200 or more signatures to the county board of elections, since local option was made a law.

When the petition is received by the county board, then the municipality so petitioning is placed on the list of those to receive the local option ballots.

This will be the first time that Perkasie has voted on Sunday movies.

The only other North Penn community ever to exercise its local option was Ambler, where the issue lost six years ago, and won last year. When Sunday movies are defeated, the local option act prohibits the issue being brought up again for a period of five years.

The councilmanic finance committee was placed in charge of the work of confirming the signatures on the Perkasie petition.

Card games were enjoyed and a picnic lunch was served.

Mrs. Lena Burgess, who practices law in Tucson, Arizona, attended and regaled the assemblage with many amusing incidents of Western life.

GRASS CUT ON VACANT LOTS, SOUTH LANGHORNE

Borough Council Hears of Parade Plans; Receives
$546 In Tax Money

ONLY ONE ABSENTEE

DR. CHARLES F. SAMPSEL, deputy coroner of Bucks County, appeared before members of Bensalem Rotary Club, last evening, at the Green Light Restaurant, Lincoln Highway, giving interesting details of his duties in that office.

The speaker told the Rotarians of the work which devolves upon the coroner; then followed by mentioning methods of conducting the duties of the office.

Joseph Sharpe, a vice president, was in the chair, due to the absence of the Rev. Arthur F. Gibson.

The session next Tuesday will be in the form of a picnic at the Vandegrift sand pits. Contests are being planned with prizes for winners; also a picnic supper.

The temporary headquarters of the club until further notice, will be at Christ Episcopal Church, Eddington, until such time as the Green Light Restaurant is moved to a new site.

Considerable time was taken in discussing plans for the parade tomorrow evening.

The members of Plumsteadville Grange plan a "doggle" roast at their meeting on Friday evening next.

Middletown Grange has arranged for a meeting this evening in the Langhorne Memorial House.

SOUTH LANGHORNE TO STAGE BIG PARADE

Patriotic Theme Selected For Demonstration To Be Held
Tomorrow Night

BEISTER IS TO SPEAK

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Aug. 6—A patriotic theme has been selected by the Associated Business Men of South Langhorne for their second annual parade, which is scheduled for tomorrow evening.

Two new teachers were elected, one as a substitute teacher.

The resignation of Mrs. Marion Harrison Sampsel was received and accepted. The former Miss Harrison recently married Dr. Charles P. Sampsel. The vacancy created was filled by the election of John Benedict, Hazleton, and a graduate of Muhlenburg College. The salary was fixed at $1200.

Two clubs, lodges, fire companies, individuals, will parade through the borough streets, on this second most auspicious occasion arranged by the business men.

Such success marked the first annual parade, when newly-rebuilt Bellevue avenue was opened officially to the public, that this second affair has gained fine support.

The American Legion cadet drum and bugle corps of Jesse W. Soby Post, Bristol, have accepted invitations to play; the Newtown Band, and the St. Francis Industrial School band from Eddington, will be in the line of march; as will also the local Lyric Band.

The parade participants will assemble at South Langhorne Fire Company station, Woodland avenue and Center street, at 6:30, moving promptly at seven o'clock. The route of the parade will be: Center street to Lincoln Highway, to Bellevue, Oak, Holly avenues, then return via Bellevue avenue to the speakers' stand located on Bellevue, between the Lincoln highway and Crescent street.

The program at the stand will include: Singing of patriotic numbers; welcome by Ernst Heizmann, vice president of the Associated Business Men; greetings by William Rumpf, Jr., burgess of South Langhorne; and also greetings by other borough officials; address by district attorney of Bucks County, Edward G. Beister, Doylestown; street dancing with music by a popular orchestra. Joseph Downing will be the announcer, giving comments on floats, parade participants, etc.

The committee in charge of parade arrangements was headed by Joseph A. Keating, who also headed the committee for the 1940 parade.

The business men, in looking back over the past year, note much progress within the borough confines. New business structures have been erected, stores have been expanded in some instances, and improvements made to others. Nearly 20 homes have been completed in Holly Oak Manor, it is said, this being South Langhorne borough's newest development.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Langerlin have changed their place of residence from the Brien property on Main street to the house vacated by the Abbott family, along Neshaminy Creek. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ferrell and children are moving into the house vacated by the Langerlins.

All firemen of William Penn Company are asked to participate in the annual parade to be conducted by South Langhorne business men, tomorrow evening. The local firemen are to meet at the Hulmeville fire station at 6:30, or at South Langhorne fire station at 6:45. Those having uniforms are asked to wear same; but other members are urged to participate, wearing street clothes.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Stevens were Miss Edna Colder, and the Misses Alma and Florence Wright of Edgely. The latter two are sisters of Mrs. Stevens.

Harry Baker enjoyed a picnic at the heavens is nearly 40,000,000 miles away, and the group of planets revolving around the sun is one of the minor systems in the infinity of the star-studded heavens. So the Earth seems relatively about as big as a boy's baseball. Man seems to be only a speck in the vast universe.

Yet though man appears as only an atom, he has accomplished marvels with his brain. He reaches out to the uttermost parts of the universe and forms an idea of the distance across these vast spaces. He constructs a fairly good idea of what these infinitely remote suns are made of. He is little, but his brain makes him big.

There is something calming about the habit of star gazing. If personal troubles become too worrisome, it helps to go out and look at those majestic stars swinging eternally in their orbits. If the world seems almost a hell with its constant wars, the steady march of those stupendous systems across the spangled sky suggests that all things yet in heaven and earth will come out well.

It was said of Napoleon Bonaparte that someone in his presence expressed doubt that there was a God. "Who made all those stars?" said the great master of conquest.

SHORTER DAYS

Spinning serenely on its way with its freight of tedium and wearying mankind, Old Earth approaches the moment when the day and the night for all the globe will be of equal hours, except at the Poles, where twilight will last the clock around.

In anticipation, each day shaves a minute or two off its allowance of sunlight and forfeits it to the night. The days are shorter and the returning vacationist sadly notes the fact.

The sun, contracting its path in the sky in the Northern Hemisphere as it sinks southward, is above the horizon less than 14 hours, as against 15 in June. Twelve hours of day and 12 hours of night will be the allotment when, six weeks hence, the sun will traverse the Equator.

Three months later daylight will last but nine hours and only those "down under" can be tan addicts.

Not even Old Earth can please all of the people all of the time. Many persons are sorry to see summer wane in spite of its heat waves, its humidity, and wide-open radio blaring of more war. Yet life on this planet would be an experience strangely different and far less interesting were it not that the axis of its spin, tipped toward the North Star, causes the sun to lavish its favors six months on the Northern Hemisphere and six months on the Southern, carving the year into four seasons, each possessed of its own charm.

PUPPET LOVE by Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr.CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

As Bishop continued to stand solidly blocking the narrow door to the Arab, Bring asked: "May I come in? I don't wish to discuss this matter out here."

The camp was most definitely awake, with cheerful good mornings resounding as household tasks were carried into the open.

Silently Chris turned and stepped into the trailer, with Bring on his heels. They sat on the open beds, facing each other. Bring declined a cigarette and fussed nervously with some papers as Chris filled his pipe.

"I hope you will understand my coming to you in this manner," Bring began with nervous determination. "But I have just had a letter from my Mother."

Chris stopped in the act of lighting his pipe and stared at the amateur naturalist.

"That may sound a trifle peculiar, but it's about Nicky. Oh, I know you'll say you don't want to discuss her, but what I want to discuss concerns her primarily."

"Well, get to the point!"

"I'm trying," Bring struggled on. "You're a man of experience, Chris, and at times you give the effect of a man of culture—at least, of good breeding. But undoubtedly you are a man of the world. You must have surmised that I am quite devoted to Nicky... I really prefer calling her Nicola. I have written Mother concerning her. Mother is a professor of mathematics, you know; a very intellectual woman."

"She didn't approve any more than I of Nicky's travelling over the country this way. She also thought her lack of objective very bad. However, in our more recent correspondence, I have convinced Mother that Nicky does have a social conscience, that she shows, at least, embryonic talents in several directions, writing or stage-managing particularly, or she might continue with the marionettes who was to end at Tampa? She could take a hint."

"So it seems," Chris rose and stood with hunched shoulders staring out at the sunshine. "If it will help your cause, I've told Nicky I'm returning to New York after the Tampa engagement, but I had no intention of staying there."

"No, of course," Bring almost burbled, "you're not the staying type, but if I had known that, I would never have troubled you with this long recital. However, its subject is very close to my heart."

At that moment, Nicky appeared on the steps of Nemesis, and Chris suddenly felt sorry for Bring or for himself. She was so little and so young and so lovely, and his arm throbbed as though it remembered the warmth of her head against it.

"There she is," he said gloomily, "I'll see you at the fair grounds."

Nicky had been riding with Bring on beautiful Victory Drive, for hours it seemed, and finding it exceedingly difficult to keep her mind on his conversation, or even on the imposing avenue of palms. Where had Chris gone that morning? Was he trying to make it doubly evident that their partnership was to end at Tampa? She could take a hint.

"He is really a very decent chap," Bring commented, as he drove into Bush Street.

"Who?" Nicky asked.

"Chris. You know, at times, I think he is a gentleman."

"What do you mean—at times?"

"Occasionally, he gives the impression of being well born—but the waster type?" then quickly, as though to cover criticism of a competitor. "He tells me he is going to New York next week."

"Oh," shortly; then, "Yes."

"They were going through a park so riotous with flowers that nature seemed to have lost all control. And the fragrance—one could almost drown in it!"

"I wish I could drown in something," Nicky murmured on the trail of her thoughts.

"I beg your pardon?"

"I was talking to myself," she explained. "But don't mind me. Go right ahead. What were you saying?"

"Really, I hadn't got to it yet, but I was going to say—would you marry me?"

"This morning?"

"Oh, no, no! Nothing rash. You must have a week—to debate it."

"You ought to take what you can get when you can get it, Al," she murmured enigmatically.

"Exactly. You undoubtedly have been most kind to her, and I appreciate that. Never taking advantage of her or anything of the sort, though it has worried me, I'll confess. She is so lovely—and you are human, after all."

"Thanks!"

"But that's beside the point now—my reaction, I mean, not your humanity." Bring permitted himself a smile at the ambiguity. "I am going to ask her to go walking this morning, and I shall present the question to her."

"Do you expect an... an... answer this morning?"

"I would not take a final answer whether affirmative or negative. I have had weeks to think over this matter—from the moment I danced with her at the country club, and she must take at least a week to adjust her mind to this problem. Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

We thank Thee, O God, for those who have gone before us, whose privilege it was to serve Thee in former years. We thank Thee for their consecration and devotion. We thank Thee, for their example in Christian living. We thank Thee for the heritage which they have given us. May we hold high the torch they have passed to us; being just as faithful and just as devoted to the task of furthering Thy Kingdom, those who follow us may be blessed, even as we have been blessed. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

GALLAGHER MOVES ROHM & HAAS IX INTO 2ND PLACE

"Billy" Pitches Shutout Ball and Defeats the Odd Fellows

FINAL SCORE IS 3 TO 0

Gallagher Struck Out Eight Batters and Gave Two Free Trips

With "Billy" Gallagher hurling shut-out ball, the Rohm and Haas team moved into second place in the Bristol Suburban League last evening as the chemical workers won over the Odd Fellows, 3-0, on the Maple Beach diamond.

In handing the Oddies their coat of whitewash, Gallagher held them to five hits. He was especially tight in the pinches and on several occasions, the Oddies had chances to score with but a lone hit.

Gallagher struck out eight batters and handed out two free trips to first. In the first, fifth and sixth innings, the Oddies had runners on second and third only to fail to solve Gallagher for the bingle that would have meant runs. In the fifth only one was out when this situation cropped up but Gallagher was equal to the task. The first two batters reached base for the Odd Fellows in the second but Gallagher whiffed Praul, got Bispham on a grounder and when Purcell attempted to steal home he was put out.

"Milt" Jones was the losing hurler and he held the chemical workers to a sextet of bingles. Gallagher led the attack on Jones by getting two out of three. "Ike" Watson robbed Locke out of a hit in the fourth by a back-hand stop of his roller between first and second and then beating the runner to the bag.

Lew Bispham and Oppman played good ball afteir for their respective teams.

The Badenhausen-Edgely game and the Diamond-Fleetwings game were called off because of wet grounds.
